

PRESS RELEASE

Racing Force Group at the forefront for the 2025 Formula 1 season

Large-scale engagement with all Group brands and full spectrum of products and technologies

Ronco Scrivia (Genova, Italy), March 12th, 2025 - Racing Force Group, a global leader in motorsport safety equipment, is gearing up for the new season of the FIA Formula 1 World Championship. The Group is deploying its brands OMP, Bell Racing, Zeronoise, and Racing Spirit to provide their technology and expertise to teams, drivers, and partners, starting with the Australian Grand Prix on March 16.

The major news for 2025 is the partnership between OMP and adidas Motorsport, which has reached full swing with the official supply of racewear for the Mercedes-AMG Petronas Formula 1 Team. Race drivers Andrea Kimi Antonelli and George Russell, along with reserve drivers and mechanics involved in pit-stop operations, will wear fire-retardant products (suits, gloves, shoes, and underwear) that combine OMP's cutting-edge solutions with designs created in collaboration with adidas Motorsport and Mercedes-AMG Petronas Formula 1 Team.

Two of the ten teams will continue to equip their cars with OMP seat belts, the benchmark for safety, lightness and comfort, thanks to the use of Dyneema®, the world's strongest fiber.

The Bell Racing brand, which won 15 Grands Prix last year, maintains its leadership in helmet supply in Formula 1, with 14 out of 20 drivers - 70 percent of the grid - using the HP77 model featuring a sophisticated carbon fiber shell. This includes 7-time world champion Lewis Hamilton, who has switched to Scuderia Ferrari HP alongside Charles Leclerc, Lando Norris, and Oscar Piastri from McLaren, the winner of the 2024 World Constructors' Championship. Other drivers include George Russell, Kimi Antonelli, Fernando Alonso, Carlos Sainz, Pierre Gasly, Alex Albon, Esteban Ocon, Oliver Bearman, and rookie Gabriel Bortoleto.

Bell Racing helmets are prepared for the integration of the Driver's Eye, the world's smallest micro-camera for live broadcasting, developed by Zeronoise, Racing Force Group's electronic division. Since 2021, this camera has offered TV spectators a totally immersive experience, providing the exact point of view of the driver during the race.

Racing Spirit, the Group's brand specializing in high-quality technical apparel, continues its relationship with Pirelli Motorsport, the official tire supplier in Formula 1. Since 2022, Pirelli Motorsport's on-track staff has been equipped with Racing Spirit garments suitable for any weather conditions encountered during the 24 Grand Prix season.

Racing Force Group products are also present at the highest level in the Formula 2, Formula 3 and F1 Academy support championships, in particular with more than 50 percent of the helmets, as well as with the supply of seat belts for Dallara spec single-seaters in F2 and F3.
